

September 26, 2025: On The Strategy of Lost Souls

I am being agitated this morning from the moment that I woke up to the present moment to give attention to the lost souls of Donald Trump's American government.

I am writing to convey the message that exposes their childish plot to lie, cheat, and steal their way into a more advantageous position for themselves at any cost.

I have been given the unique opportunity to experience the essential truth of what Donald Trump's campaign for personal gain is actually doing to achieve its personal growth at the expense of everyone around them.

I am offering the solution as simply watching this old man move beyond his moment and waiting for our normal lives to return to us.

In truth, the 'powers' of the world have forsaken all principles that restrain them to proper conduct except one - our own moral decency.

The strategy that is being employed by these children is simple, they are agitating and distracting us from our own path to enter into theirs as we chase them off of our property.

The truth is that none of us were attacking their campaign - we, in our home, were supporting Donald Trump in his lying persona to help Americans and the world.

The campaign then began interacting with us to 'draw us' into their influence. Many people in America were drawn by their efforts to enter into the political world and to express ourselves and our opinions.

Instead of gathering our inclinations and aligning with us for the unity of America and the world, the childish forces that are running the government elected to continue agitating us all into further and further reactions for their own personal benefits.

The end result is their naked attempt to manipulate us in the world to their own advantage.

We rightfully moved when it was appropriate to move and now we are staying still when it is appropriate to stay still.

In fact, from the Donald Trump criminal enterprise, I can relay to you that their campaign was begging for people 'play fetch' with their false idol while the false idol pretended to be stoic and not react.

The Donald Trump criminal campaign is attempting to agitate and influence other people to take actions while they pretend to not be involved and / or never even notice.

In finally being exposed to their plot 'in full steam' we can conclude that there is a large team and network of childish actors that are seeking to influence world events and personal events to get our attention and drive us into some pattern for them to further attack us with their childish ways.

The big news lately is Russian aggression and Israeli genocide.
On how and when to retaliate.

The truth is the we all have a right to defend our property.

If I were a country experiencing the threat of deadly force from either of these aggressive nations, I would consider myself free to engage with deadly force at the moment that any of our lives were being placed in danger. And the freedom to engage should end when that threat to our lives has ended.

I am not supportive of endless waves of retaliation to achieve revenge for something that happened two years ago or more. If hostages are being held, then one continuous campaign should be driven into the specific region to free those hostages. It is a highly immoral conflation of values to rage against innocent lives while claiming that the effort is stirred on by holding innocents in a hostage situation.

If you are not capable of getting those hostages back, then why expend the resources at all? Shouldn't Israel be saving up and gathering the right power structure to actually succeed instead of creating endless waves of violence that lead to mass destruction without achieving the specific goal that they intended? The freedom to engage and whether to engage are two separate inquiries that these childish clowns are seeking to blur into one determination.

We can all clearly see that the childish plan of these aggressors is to place the lives of innocent people into risk while they agitate us to 'do something about it' so that they can accomplish their next step - active engagement.

Consider back to the Nazis of Germany. At some point, it became apparent that an invasion must begin in order to save those that were being held hostage by the Nazi criminal enterprise. Meanwhile, their Nazi monster was gathering steam and collecting people and places to its own advantage.

Here, we see the same game playing out from a trilateral force between Russia, Israel, and the United States of America. They are one active agitation force aligning itself in various postures to provoke the other people and places of the world to engage in wars that we had no inclination to begin or advance on our own.

Clearly, the forces that represent these three areas are attempting to engage the world in a firework event wherein their chaos monster can begin thrashing about with greater and greater justification. Consider the actions of Israel and multiply it exponentially.

So, the answer of when (and how) to respond should be calculated based off of several other considerations that are not simply whether we have the right to engage - the questions truly resolve themselves under the categories of whether we should engage on moral grounds and for what purpose.

Are we simply being baited into wasting our resources? Are we attempting to protect our own growth potential? How effective will our efforts be in achieving a positive result? Are we helping to save the lives of others? Or, are we simply presenting an image?

Based upon the answers to those questions, I am asserting that an invasion of Israel is far more urgent than an invasion of Russia. Ukraine has clearly been on a campaign to wage war in defense of its own territories - but who really controls the Ukrainian government? Who are we actually helping in advancing that interest?

Israel, on the other hand is approaching the type of behavior that we saw from Nazi Germany that justified an American invasion to put that matter to rest. Too many innocent lives were being lost for the world to sit back and watch any longer. The world needed to unite to do something.

Now, contrast my opinions with the current childish inclinations of Donald Trump. Donald Trump is still defending Israel in their ongoing quest to destroy. And now, Donald Trump is attempting to convince Europe that Ukraine can win back all of its territory. The natural conclusions to these arguments are that we should allow Israel to continue and to begin enlarging the fight in Russia.

These are the exact opposite conclusions that I reach. Engaging Russia only enflames a matter that is an internal fight between Russia uniforms and their own mafia brother. Failing to engage Israel only allows Israel to continue engaging in an expanding war against regional people of a different type altogether.

We can clearly distinguish between evil inside of the country and the country as a whole. Why can't Israel? Why are so many innocent, non-combatant, lives being lost? Because there is a greater plot operating to Israel's advantage - they are expanding their war into destruction of purely innocent lives.

If Russia chooses to advance itself beyond the battle front of their own offspring, then the world must make a choice based upon how effective their expenditure of resources will be versus whether they need to continue gaining more resources to defend innocent lives.

However, if the world takes swift and proper action to end the Israeli invasion of their regional enemies in the same way that America moved to end the regional expansion of Nazi Germany, then the efforts will work on two levels.

First, this use of resources will curtail and end the wanton destruction of innocent lives that is being advanced by Israel, which is a victory in its own right.

However, secondarily, it will prove to Russia that their own agitation advance into Europe will be met with a destructive end to their own efforts if they were to continue. Once Russia witnesses the swift end of Israel's injustices, they will quietly draw back from their own injustice as well.

On a final note, China is watching all of this unfold and calculating its own political decisions as to how, where, and when it may be able to gather more resources for its own growth.

The world has a choice: keep pretending that they are doing everything that they can against Israel (which is no sort of military action whatsoever). While at the same time, the world is advancing military action against Russia over its Ukraine invasion into its own mafia offspring.

OR, the world can let Russia meddle in the affairs of its own criminality and bring decisive resolution to the Israeli government's truly genocidal campaign against innocent lives in Palestine that are clearly seeking to peacefully return to their only homes or seeking food to survive.

There is a major difference in strategies. Personally, if I held the cards of European diplomats, I would be aligning my troops against Israel while watching the perimeter of Russia's actual deadly conduct - not simply its agitation-related posturing.

Clearly, Donald Trump and the American military are siding with the advancement of violence for the sake of advancing violence while encouraging and supporting an already too violent campaign at the same time.

It is time to bring the violence back to peace. Israel, I am bringing my war to your front door now and Russia, China, and USA military - watch closely to see the results of carrying out illegal, unlawful, and immoral attacks in the world of God's moral people.
